Nevzat Karabulut
Editor in Chief

The peer-review process is an indispensable component of biomedical journalism to ensure and maintain overall quality of published scientific papers. Many independent reviewers generously invest their time and expertise to evaluate submissions to Diagnostic and Interventional Radiology. Their high quality and timely expert opinions are invaluable to meet the highest scientific and educational quality standards of our journal. Every year, on behalf of the Editorial Board, I acknowledge their service. Every one of our reviewers will receive a certificate signifying their contribution to our journal. We will also present the Editor's Recognition Awards to those who consistently provided top level service to Diagnostic and Interventional Radiology beyond our expectations.
